<<大学笔记>>

前言

In 1955, or more than fifty years ago, over thirty Chinese young students with warmth and enthusiasm of doing worthy deeds in the service of our motherland made light of traveling thousands of miles to go to Prague and started our overseas study lasting as long as six years, without knowing even a single Czech word. Firstly, we studied Czech for one year, and then started our five-year university life. My Czech was taught through Russian, and for some of my classmates, their Czech was taught through English. The six-year study was intense, pleasant and interesting. The Czech teachers and professors were very kind to us. They provided us with a good education. What we learned and saw during our six-year stay in Europe's cultural heartland greatly benefited us and made us never forget. Meanwhile, we made a lot of friends including both Czechoslovak friends and those from other countries. As a young man from Yan'an old revolutionary base, I first time had the world in my view, and this became a delightful memory and was always engraved on my mind. There was a good tradition among the Chinese students in former Czechoslovakia: making an appointment to get together annually. During their lifetime, Comrade Cao Ying, the former Chinese Ambassador to Czechoslovakia, and his wife Chen Weiqing invited us to their home every year. All of us felt happy and harmonious. Since the "Cultural Revolution" in particular, our get-togethers have become regular practices without fail. Time passed by and years were just like melodies. The former energetic boys and girls have long become grey-haired. Although we are over seventy years old, our annual party, at which we inquire after each other's well-being, recall the past and talk about the present, remains unchanged. The years flew, and many things changed, but the past events are still clear and vivid in our memory. The university life of those years in Prague is our regular topic of conversation. And we always cherish the memory of the friendship between the Chinese and Czechoslovakian people with deep affection. It is precisely these unforgettable feelings and thoughts that enabled me to keep my study notes during my stay at the College of Mathematics and Physics, Charles University. But due to the changes in the process of fifty years and the journey from very distant lands, these notes had to go through the repeated damages. Now only part of them could be well preserved. For example, the classroom notes on philosophy and selections from Czech grammar, which I like very much, as well as the notes on chemistry, economics and machinery, etc. were lost. Just those on mathematics and physics can be partly kept. The greater part of these notes were taken in the classroom, and the rest were the reading notes. In addition, there were no textbooks in Chinese at that time, my study notes both in and outside class were taken either in Czech or in Russian. Only a part of my notes were taken in Chinese in 1957 and were longer. They were lecture notes on analytic geometry for helping the Chinese freshmen of 1956 in Czechoslovakia to make up their missed lessons. Instead of being clear, the handwriting of this part of notes was rather sloppy by comparison. The rest of my notes were all the study notes. Recently I found out the notes. Although they experienced fifty years of great changes and mobility, their handwriting is still sharp enough to identify. They are a historical account of our study and life in the remote past. The errors in them can hardly be avoided, but anyway this is a memory of the past, a feeling that we find difficult to part with. In recent years, some veteran cadres have more than once suggested printing them. It is hard to turn down the offer made with such warm-heartedness. Now we would like to photocopy the notes here according to their original appearance, so as to express our thinking of Czechoslovakian teachers and our respect for them, and to make the notes a historical record of the study and life of overseas Chinese students in those years.
