内容概要

This book introduces to readers over 50 private collections , five trade museums and five antique markets in Shanghai. The private collections are small in scale , established in their own homes by collectors with an enthusiasm for curios . Generally , the display rooms serve not just as display space but as living rooms too. The owners have started display rooms in their homes because they want to share collecting experiences and discuss them with other people and , in so doing , perhaps becoming friends . These collections are not as famous as those of national museums . but they are highly specialized and the atmosphere is warm , comfortable and easy. You may sip a cup of tea while you visit and , provided you get the owner ' s consent , you may touch the exhibits and consult with the owner .

whenever you plan to visit such a collection,always call ahead and arrange a time before you turn up.with a few exceptions,entry to these 50 collections is free of very cheap.after visting for tree,you may present a little gift to the owner.you should pay the owner for documents,pictures and souvenirs you get from him or her.it is not essential to book a visit to the trade museums.in the antique markets never handle the items before asking the price.
