<<中国农民大迁徙>>

内容概要

本书是由吕国光编写的《中国农民大迁徙：农民工口述实录》(英文版)

。《中国农民大迁徙：农民工口述实录》(英文版)的内容提要如下： This remarkable book reveals the human cost of China's staggering growth, not in statistics but in the plain, unvarnished stories of China's migrant workers, who, for more than two decades, have journeyed from the provinces, flooding into China's urban centers, fueling the fires that drive its engines of urban growth and economic expansion. From factory workers to neon sign maker to starry-eyed entrepreneur, here are the hopes, dreams, triumphs, and heartbreaking tragedies of several generations of migrant workers. A must-read for those interested in contemporary China studies, oral histories, labor history, and emerging global economies.

章节摘录

I had never expected that finding my first job would go so smoothly. At first , I didn't understand why this man was treating me so well. As a fresh girl just out of school , I was delighted to have found a job so quickly. I felt surprised as well as lucky. I learned that this man was the boss of the company , and his name was Xiao. On August 17 , 2000 , I started my working career. A superintendent took me to my work place on the second floor. As my major in school was accounting , I was assigned to the warehouse. He gave me my job : to keep count of products. When I came in , all the girls in the place stared at me , and I heard all sort of whispers : "Look at this beautiful girl , why would she want to work here she graduated from a secondary technical school..... ? I bet she will leave soon.....She won't be able to cope with the workload....." I kept my head down and dared not even make eye contact with the others. I simply told myself that I would do a good job. These people talking about me in this way knew nothing of my situation. I could do the job as well as they did. I told myself that I shouldn't let them look down on me. I had a fellow worker , named Xiaohong , in the warehouse. She treated me very kindly. She taught me how to count and earnestly explained the procedures to me , though it was really very simple. How ever , I was on my feet all day long , shuttling between the ground floor and the second floor. I quickly grew tired as the time went by My daily routine was hard , but dull. There were only three places for me to go : the dormitory , the canteen , and my workplace. I became accustomed to a life spent between these three spots. As the factory had to fulfill whatever orders coming in , we had to work on Sundays too. That meant we didn't have any free time.

Many people look down on our migrant workers. But society is a big family. If I do not adapt myself to it , I will never be accepted. I think the best thing I can do is to keep away from bad things. I have been away from home for several years , but I have never been homesick. It is strange. Perhaps it is because I know I still have a long road to travel before going home..... —Zhang Sheng , male , 20 , supervisor of leather bag processing

Now my greatest dream is to earn more money so as to satisfy my wife's wishes , which are to enable my child to study at better schools , and to provide a more comfortable life for my parents. Everyone should have aspirations. Although your aims may not be easy to achieve , you can turn them into reality through your own hard work. —Zhao Fangshuan , male , 23 , road worker

As time passes , I have become weary of the crowds and the din of the city , and I detest the way that people intrigue against each other. Gradually , I begin to miss the open lands of my home and the modest folk ways of my fellow villagers. But I know only too well that my poor home village can't compete with the affluent and prosperous city. I'm not obsessed with money , but money is useful. I need money to pay for the cost of my children's daily life and education , to improve my own living conditions , and to live a comfortable life..... —Yang Shuangshuang , male , 46 , truck driver
