内容概要

孔尚任编著的《桃花扇》内容介绍：In 1699, after more than ten years" work on three different drafts, KungShang-jen finally produced The Peach Blossom Fan, a traditional opera in forty scenes. The heroine of the play, Li Hsiang-chun, was a famous courtesan in Nanking at the end of the Ming dynasty. Her love for Hou Chao-tsung, the hero of the drama_ and many of the characters and incidents connected with their romance were for the most part based on fact. And KungShang-jen used these events and characters to present the rise and fall of the southern Ming regime in 1644 and 1645.

章节摘录

Which soon turn tail and backwards flee. I'm Huang Te-Kung, also named Hu-san, well known for bravery, my loyal heart is filled with indignation. I swear to recover the wide expanse of lost land for Emperor Hungkuang, but regretfully, the two generals Liu have yet made no contribution, and General Tso poses a great threat. Now I've received the martial orders of Minister of the Army Yuan, summoning me to station my army at Panchi to intercept General Tso's troops. This task is not to be trifled with. (Calling. Where's my general Tien Hsiung? Tien: Here. Huang: Immediately tell the three forces to wait for my orders. (The soldiers stand in battle array and shout. Huang sings.) The chieftain of rebels dare His majesty defy, The mob of bandits obey not command of the Emperor, The Sovereign is fragile and weak, pale in colour, The courtiers struggle fierce for position high. I alone am left at the river to look forth And guard against the galloping steeds from north, When news comes that towering ships have reached the estuary. The warriors with no fears, Over the upper stream the banners wildly fly; The rapiers and spears, Over the downward flow the smoking flames rise high. (Huang's soldiers mount the tower. Tso's soldiers in white uniform with white banners in their hands shout on the ships. Huang's soldiers shoot at them, they in defeat retreat, and Huang's soldiers rush down in pursuit.) Tso: (Sitting in the ship, in white armour and helmet, singing.) The tyrannic king takes revenge for courtiers vile, The vicious courtiers fawn upon the monarch imbecile; The turncoat officials bow low to the enemy reign, The bastard generals swear allegiance to the evil sovereign, To His majesty in heaven a loyal heart I bare, To rescue the crown prince in haste is my care, Though an infamy of a myriad years I may bear.
