<<宪政与中国>>

内容概要

In 1978, China entered into a new era of "reform and opening up", in which four strategic transformations began to take place. "Taking class struggle as the key link" gave way to economic construction as the central task; isolation was replaced by opening up to the outside world; planned economy moved towards market economy and "rule of law" began to replace "rule of man." Some of these transformations have already basically been completed, while others still need several decades to complete. Nevertheless, the achievements China has made in all four the world. I feel gratified and proud to be a witness to these historical transformations and to be an active participant in the construction of the modern rule of law in China.

In 1978, China entered into a new era of “ reform and opening up ” , in which four strategic transformations began to take place . “ Taking class struggle as the key link ” gave way to economic construction as the central task ; isolation was replaced by opening up to the outside world ; planned economy moved towards market economy and “ rule of law ” began to replace “ rule of man . ” Some of these transformations have already basically been completed , while others still need several decades to complete . Nevertheless , the achievements china has made in all four arenas are remarkable and have drawn attention from the world . I feel gratified and proud to be a witness to these historical transformations and to be an active participant in the construction of the modern rule of law in China . Today , academic exchange between the Chinese and international law circles is on the rise . China needs to understand the world , just as the world needs to understand China . Yet , few Chinese legal scholars are able to write in English . Nor have many Chinese legal works been translated and published outside China . This has created great difficulties for foreign scholars in understanding the historical development and the current situation of legal studies in China . The purpose of this English collection of papers is to facilitate the academic exchange between Chinese and international law circles . I hope this book will provide some useful information and materials to foreign scholars who are interested in the construction of rule of law in China .
