章节摘录

Special groups including senior citizens , children , workers in enterprises with difficulties , and migrant workers have always fallen through the cracks in the medical insurance system . However , now the medical insurance is to cover these special groups . College students will all be covered in the urban residents' medical insurance system starting this year . Children and elderly people without income will be covered by the urban residents' medical insurance system or the new countryside cooperative medical scheme . A pilot project is getting underway in China to introduce basic medical insurance for urban residents . The target group includes children , school students plus the unemployed in 79 different cities . A major part of their medical fees will be paid by local governments if they exceed a certain amount . For those under financial difficulties , the governments promise extra subsidies . The experimental project will be launched in seventy-nine cities in September .
