章节摘录

版权页 : So he came in and sat down across the hearth from me, and neither of us said anything. The firelight flickered over the room, bringing out the faded hues of the old Japanese prints on the walls, gleaming in the mother-of-pearl eyes of the dragon on the screen, setting a grotesque god on a cabinet to nodding. And it threw into relief the strong profile of the man across from me, as he stared at the fire. "I am afraid I am not very interesting" I said at last, when he showed no sign of breaking the silence. "The - the illness of the butler and - Miss Caruthers' arrival, have been upsetting." He suddenly roused with a start from a brown reverie. "I beg your pardon," he said, "I - oh, of course not !

I was wondering if I - if you were offended at what I said earlier in the evening; the - Brushwood Boy, you know, and all that." "Offended ?

" I repeated, puzzled. "You see, I have been living out of the world so long, and never seeing any women but Indian squaws" - so there were no Spanish girls !

- "that I'm afraid I say what comes into my mind with out circumlocution, And then - I did not know you were married." "No, oh, no," I said hastily. "But, of course, the more a woman is married - I mean, you can not say too many nice things to married women. They - need them, you know."
