章节摘录

One year after the accident, a party of us celebrated Beverley's birthday at a local restaurant. Her ankles aren't so flexible anymore, and she has metal pins in her feet, but she looked stunning. And I saw something that night that will stay with me always and remind me what strength of character really means. When she was walking towards me, her heel pressed down on one of the metal pins and for an instant, I saw her wince in excruciating pain. Then she smiled, straightened her shoulders and said, "Oh, it's nothing. Have you all got Kevin has shown his own special brand of courage. Since leaving the hospital, he has enough to eat? " worked out every day in the gym, without exception. He goes to spinning classes, and he works on the leg press to increase the flexibility in his left leg and strengthen the muscles around his knee. He cycles to and from work every day. His work has paid off. He passed his physical and got the all clear to pilot planes again. According to the surgeons in France and Jersey, their injuries indicate they must have hit the ground at around sixty miles per hour. That they survived at all was a miracle —— a honeymoon miracle. God must have known that they had more life to live together. And the paramedics who first arrived said that it was "good luck" that Beverley landed on top of Kevin, which prevented him from moving. Any slight movement could have severed the main artery of his eg that was still connected, and he would have likely died.
