章节摘录

Rowling named her wizard Harry Potter. She began keeping a notebook about him. She wrote down lots of details about him and his life. Meanwhile Rowling decided to change her life. In 1991, at age 26, she quit her job as a secretary and left England. She moved to Portugal and took a job teaching English. Soon she fell in love, got married, and had a baby. Although her life was busier than ever, she still found time to write about Harry. Rowling's marriage did not last. In 1993 she returned to England. Now she had a problem. She had no job. She had no money. And she had a baby to support. For the next two years, Rowling barely got by. She and her daughter lived in a cold little apartment. To get out of the apartment, Rowling would go out for walks with the baby. Rowling would put little Jessica in a baby carriage. Then she would head to a nearby cafe. While Jessica slept, Rowling would sit and work on her Harry Potter story. "She was quite an odd sight," recalls the cafe owner. He remembers her rocking the stroller back and forth with one hand and writing with the other.
