Unit 致谢 How to Study This Course Ne'er So Well Expressed The Heart of the Matter A Man for All Seasons Where the Place? A Sea of Troubles In My Mind's Eye And Then? A Mirror of Society and Social Change Appendix: The Stage as a Mirror Glossary

章节摘录

插图：The following points delineate some of the guidelines that we adopt for this course:1. We are going to read a selection of texts of different genre from the literary canon in the English language.2. We approach a text by first paying attention to the use of language and language structure, which should lead to a better understanding of its meanings and styles.3. We focus on how language is used to bring out (levels of) meanings.4. We need to understand that expression of meaning in literary texts is special.5. We need to learn to understand and 'feel' the language in literature.6. We aim at learning language skills, but we try to make both language learning and literature reading a rewarding experience. Finally, you are invited to share the teachers' (presumably as well as anyone else's) enthusiasm for a good piece of literature. Apart from your attention to their language points and literary analysis, you should also have a genuine interest in literature in order to learn better. Whether you agree to this or not, we as teachers believe that an interest in literature is caught, not taught. So you are encouraged to read more than this course book, and read as much as you can. It is for this purpose a reading companion is prepared. We look forward to the moment when students discover for themselves the wonders in what is " ne'er so well expressed ". And let us know if you have made such a discovery.
