章节摘录

To increase your reading speed , the first thing is that you need to practice your decoding skill. There are some exercises specially designed to practice your ability to recognize words and phrases quickly. You can find it in all speed reading books. Secondly , practice on something easy and interesting first. Many students who want to improve their effective reading speed may feel discouraged when they find once they read a passage faster , the reading comprehension is low. Here their problems might be that the reading material itself is too difficult. It is pointed out if there are five or six new words on each page , then the materials are not suitable for speed training. Thirdly , you need to use effective reading strategies we discussed in Activity One. Skimming , scanning , and recognizing text structures are particularly helpful to speed reading. Fourthly , check your progress through pacing. You may have noticed that nearly all "speed reading" courses have a pacing element—some timing device which lets the readers know how many words a minute they are reading. Fifthly , try some "lightning speed" exercises. Read a text as fast as you possibly can. Don't bother about whether you understand or not. Then go back and read them at what you feel to be your "normal" w.p.m. (word per minute) rate , the rate at which you can comfortably understand. After a "lightning speed" , your "normal speed" has increased——perhaps by as much as 50-100 w. p.m. Lastly , read English every day. Spend at least 15 minutes or half an hour each day on reading. Also it is a good idea to have a general interest book in your pocket.
