章节摘录

On one of those walks , George noticed a tiny square-cut stone on the path by his feet. Curious , he picked it up and rubbed off the dust. It was black and shiny , with a fish-design cut into its surface. George didn't know then that the stone was 1 , 700 years old , but he was drawn to its delicate beauty. He had the stone set in a gold ring which he put on the third finger of his left hand. The ring was George's only personal possession. He wore it day in , day out for forty years : on his wedding day , on the day his son was born , all through the years when he was in charge of a hospital in Southern England. George even wore the ring when he was gardening— and that was how he came to lose it. Coming in to wash his hands one day , George saw with a shock that the ring was missing. Having kept it always as something to remind him of Athens , he was deeply upset to have lost it.
