<<紫禁城>>

内容概要

The Forbidden City which is called the Palace Museum now occupies the central part of Beijing Municipality and was the imperial palace of the Ming and Qing dynasties. Its construction began in 1406, so it has a history of nearly 600 years. Over the years after its completion, 24 emperors ruled the country from here for nearly 500 years.

With many halls and pavilions, the Forbidden City looks resplendent and magnificent. It occupies an area of over 720,000 square meters with some 9,000 bays of halls and rooms. There are magnificent rear halls, quiet pathways, secret places where important matters were discussed and an imperial garden for the emperor and his family as well as imposing halls and open squares. The Forbidden City is divided into two parts: the outer court and the inner court. The former is the place where emperors handled court affairs and held different ceremonies. It consists of Taihe, Zhonghe and Baohe halls, and to either side in front of these halls the Wenhua Hall and Wuying Hall are on the east and west respectively. The inner court consists of Qianqing, Jiaotai and Kunming palaces where the emperor lived and attended to State affairs. The Imperial Garden lies north of the Kunming Palace where green pines, exotic flowers and rare stones, pavilions and two-storied houses, ponds and waterside pavilions look like a natural picture.
