章节摘录

Extension from the Text 1. Speaking Say something about "Young Goodman Brown", giving play to your imagination based on clues in the text. "Young Goodman Brown" is one of Hawthorne's most famous short stories. It deals with the titular hero's adventures on a certain night in the forest and their influence upon his subsequent life. Brown is an ordinary man living in Salem village. One night, after his marriage, he leaves his wife, Faith, and goes to the forest to meet the Devil there. And then he continues his company with the latter in spite of his unwillingness. Brown is very surprised to discover many worthy people and even his own wife in such a heathen wilderness at night. The Devil incites the congregation to convert. The next morning Brown returns to Salem village, where everything goes as before as if nothing had happened. But Brown has become a changed man, behaving differently until his gloomy death.

2. Cloze Goodman Brown, like most people, wants to experience evil, not perpetually, of course, for he is by and large a decent chap, a respectably married man, a member of a church, but he desires to "taste the forbidden fruit" before settling down to the business of being a solid citizen and attaining "the good wife". He feels that he can do this because he means to retain his religious 1) faith, personified in his wife, who, to reinforce the 2) allegory, is even named Faith. But in order to encounter 3) evil, he must part with his 4) wife, at least temporarily, something he is either 5) willing or compelled to do. It is here that he makes his fatal mistake, for 6) evil turns out to be not some abstraction nor something that can be played with for a while and then put down, but the very 7) pillars of Goodman Brown's world--his ancestors, his earthly rulers, his spiritual overseers, and finally his Faith. In short, so overpowering is the fact and the 8) universality of evil in the world that Goodman Brown comes to doubt the existence of any 9) good. By looking upon the very face of evil, he is transformed into a 10) cynic and a misanthrope whose "dying hour was gloom".
