章节摘录

插图：10. The answer is b. (Jacobson, pp 85-91.) The essential features of obsessive-compulsive disorder are obsessions (recurrent and persistent thoughts that are experienced as intrusive and inappropriate and that cause anxiety) and compulsions (repetitive behaviors that the person feels driven to perform) . In this disorder, the patient's symptoms are egodystonic to him or her, unlike the person with an obsessive-compulsive personality disorder. Patients with attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder have problems with inattention, hyperactivity, and/or impulsivity. Patients with separation anxiety disorder worry about losing or harming major attachment figures and become anxious when separation from home or those major figures is anticipated. Patients with brief psychotic disorder show evidence of either delusions or hallucinations for a short period of time, usually after exposure to some external stressor.11. The answer is e. (Kaplan, p 310.) A global assessment of functioning between 51 and 60 denotes the presence of a moderate amount of symptoms. One can see mild symptomatology (eg, circumstantiality or occasional panic attacks) or this rating denotes moderate problems with social functioning (problems working, few friends, etc) .
